

Rahman Tafahomi

Rahman Tafahomi holds a PhD in Architecture, Postgraduate Certificate in Learning and Teaching in Higher Education, and ELE (E-Learning Expert) in online teaching. He currently works in the department of architecture as an associate professor. His themes of teaching in the department encompass landscape design, urban design and public space, thesis, and architectural research methodologies. He has experience in architecture, landscape, urban design, and conservation projects. His areas of interest in the research are included architecture, landscape design, urban design, behavioural patterns, teaching and learning in design, and educational methods and approaches. He is also a reviewer in some journal publishers such as Web of Science, Taylor and Francis, and MDPI.